Complaints. Victory cheers accompanied by gripes about lines, toilets and ATMs

Amid the cheering, excitement and Redblacks victory, there were some complaints — long food lineups, a washroom out of service, and ATMs that weren't ready were also part of the fan experience at Friday's home opener at TD Place. Bernie Ashe says things are going to get better in time for the next home game.

"We're not there yet. This is a work in process," said

Ashe, CEO of the Ottawa Sports and Entertainment Group (OSEG) Sunday morning.

The game, which saw Ottawa beat the Toronto Argonauts 18-17 in the final minute, drew in a sold-out crowd of more than 24,000 people.

"To get the combination of construction issues, technology issues and operational issues ... and have everything work properly is going to take us some time," said Ashe. "Friday night was our first time that we had 24,300 people in the building and we had some problems related to just having that kind of volume."

The women's washroom on the north side had to be closed due to a drain-pipe blockage caused by construction debris, Ashe said. As a result, an adjacent food-and-beverage stand had to be shut down for health and safety reasons.

The point-of-sale system was also plagued by sporadic glitches when it became flooded by hungry and thirsty customers. That was also fixed Saturday.

Three new portable ATMs were added for Sunday's Ottawa Fury game versus the New York Cosmos.

"The TD ATMs are going to be working in time for the next Redblacks game, so that's good news," said Ashe.

Despite the inaugural glitches, the crowd was electric as they took in the game on a balmy summer night.

Ashe said OSEG met its target of having 60 per cent of fans arrive at TD Place either by OC Transpo or shuttle bus, both of which were free for ticket holders.

"OC Transpo did a terrific job of anticipating and reacting and getting extra buses for the drive in," he added. Ashe said it took 45 minutes to get everyone out of the stadium, which was expected. JOE LOFARO/METRO

First win of the season

Air electric as Redblacks win first TD Place game

It was a nail-biter finish for the Ottawa Redblacks, but the CFL expansion team narrowly beat the Toronto Argonauts 18-17 on Friday night.

The team was down by two points in the final quarter, but with less than 30 seconds left, Brett Maher kicked a field goal that pulled the Redblacks ahead by one point.

Red fireworks blasted into the air as fans in the red and black stands at TD Place Stadium stood to cheer their home team.

It was the team's first win this season, after losing to the Edmonton Eskimos 27-11 and Winnipeg Blue Bombers 36-28.

The air had been electric the entire night, with more than 24,000 excited fans filling the stadium.

"It's Christmas," said Nick Hamilton, with his face and torso painted half-black, half-red. He said it's a "better vibe" than it was nine years ago, when the former team, the Ottawa Renegades, last played.

"Everything's better," he said. "There's more room, seats are better, the owners are better, the team is better."

Ron Legge drove from Carleton Place with his season tickets — just as he did for the Renegades and the Rough Riders (both their first and second go-rounds).

"We've been waiting quite a while (for a CFL team)," he said. "They had to do it right so they had to take their time. I think it's got a good chance of sticking. The backers are strong."

Cops investigate third shooting since June

The Ottawa Police Guns and Gangs Unit is investigating the third shooting in as many weeks in which a man was shot in both legs and refused to cooperate with investigators.

The first shooting was on June 22 in the ByWard Market, while the second one was on Canada Day in an undisclosed location.

On Friday, police released a photo of a suspect in a third such shooting that happened last Thursday in the 100 block of Horsdal Private, near the intersection of Hunt Club and Conroy Road around 7:10 p.m.

Ottawa police released this photo of a man they believe is responsible for a south-end shooting. HANDOUT

In that incident, police say the victim in his 20s suffered "two gunshot wounds to his lower extremities." They said Thursday the victim, who was admitted to hospital with non-life-threatening injuries, was not co-operating with investigators and refused to provide a statement.

Police believe Mohamed Abdi Abdullahi, 31, of Ottawa is responsible for the south-end shooting and is believed to be "armed and dangerous." His whereabouts are not known.

He is described as five-foot-10, 194 pounds, with black hair and brown eyes.

Police told Metro on July 3 the previous two double-leg shootings appeared to be unrelated.

Fury set NASL attendance record in game against New York Cosmos

New home at Lansdowne Park.

But opponents defeat Ottawa 1-0 in first-ever NASL game at TD Place

MIKE CARROCCETTO

TD Place was the place to be again on Sunday afternoon.

The Ottawa Fury FC fell 1-0 to the famed New York Cosmos, but set a North American Soccer League (NASL) attendance record of 14,593 people in their first-ever game in their brand new home at Lansdowne Park.

Fans entering the stadium received a special commemorative coin inside a plastic case, with the Fury logo on one side, and TD Place logo on the other.

Cosmos midfielder Sebastien Guenzatti scored the only goal of the game in the first half, slamming a deft one-touch shot from the box past Fury goalkeeper Devala Gorrick at the 37-minute mark.

The Fury had several chances to score in the first half and second half, including two breakaway opportunities by striker Tom Heinemann.

In the second half, they did everything but put the ball in the net, coming in waves toward Cosmos goalkeeper Jimmy Mauer.

"Two excellent teams tried to win, (but) one team was a little better (today),"

Ottawa Fury midfielder Tony Donatelli skids along the turf trying to stop a New York Cosmos player during first-half NASL action at TD Place on Sunday.

said Fury head coach Marc Dos Santos. "We had at least five clear chances (in the second half). We couldn't score, but I'm very proud of our team.

"As I told (captain) Ryan Ritchie, if we are going to lose, if the Ottawa Fury are going to lose some games, we are going to lose like we did today. (We played) with a lot of passion ... trying to come back, trying to tie the game. It's tough to lose, but I'm proud of the (team) today."

Facts of Fury

The Ottawa Fury FC's first game at its new home at Lansdowne Park was a attendance record-setter with thousands of people showing up.

- The New York Cosmos are the reigning NASL champions.
- Sunday's attendance broke the previous record of 13,151 set by the San Antonio Scorpions.
- Former Canadian Idol winner Ava Avila, of Gatineau, sang both national anthems.
- NASL commissioner Bill Peterson was at the game and said it was a "magnificent day" for the Ottawa Fury and the NASL. "It's a beautiful stadium, and it's everything they said it would be," he added.
- On Wednesday, the Fury host the Rangers FC from Glasgow, Scotland, in the first international friendly at TD Place. Kickoff is 7 p.m.

Odyssey Theatre. A game of greed at Strathcona Park

It has scoundrels, greed and backstabbing cheaters. It isn't politics or the newest reality TV show. It's The Financier (Turcaret), an early 17th-century comedy the Odyssey Theatre is bringing to Strathcona Park next week.

Written by Alain-René Lesage, it centres on Turcaret, a wealthy tax collector out to swindle others, while others are out to swindle him.

"It's about greed, but played out in a very clever way, so you never know who is going to win in the end," says director Laurie Steven.

Steven said the play's themes are still relevant. "This is all about money and paper money and easy credit that's working in society."

The Financier (Turcaret) will run July 24 to Aug. 24 from Tuesday to Sunday at 8 p.m. Ticket prices vary, but the

CAFM Ice Cream Festival. Families get the inside scoop on National Ice Cream Day

Who knew the influence of former U.S. President Ronald Reagan could stretch all the way to a kids' activity at the Canada Agriculture and Food Museum (CAFM) in Ottawa?

The CAFM Ice Cream Festival, which gives a behind-the-scenes peek at ice-cream making, has been running every third Sunday of July for several years in honour of National Ice Cream Day, which was launched in the United States by Reagan in 1984, said Jamie Reardon, assistant of visitor services at CAFM.

The event, she said, encourages kids to understand the ice-cream-making process from cow to cone.

"Once they're here they're learning while having fun," said Reardon. "They get to live it, they get to experience it and they get to see it too."

After Vanessa Castillo and five-year-old daughter Eva visited the farm animals and spent time at the variety of demonstrations, all that was left was a taste of ice cream.

"That's the main reason we came to the festival, so we're hoping to get some too," said Vanessa.

Festivalgoer Kirsty Twitale was pleased with the number of ice-cream tastings offered at the festival at different stations, but said more signs were needed.

"They're doing all sorts of things all around, but until you wander into a building you don't know," she said.

According to Maddy Imboden, membership sales associate at CAFM, the event makes for one of the year's highest membership sales days.

As part of the Canada Science and Technology Museums Corporation, the CAFM membership also covers access to the Canada Aviation and Space Museum and the Canada Science and Technology Museum. AMY YEE/METRO

Ceremony honours group that tried to assassinate Hitler

Germany on Sunday honoured a group of Nazi-era officers who tried to kill Adolf Hitler 70 years ago. The plot helped establish a principle under which German soldiers today are encouraged to defy orders if they would result in a crime or violate human dignity.

In a sombre ceremony, President Joachim Gauck called the July 20, 1944, bombing of Hitler's Wolf's Lair headquarters in Eastern Prussia a "significant day in German history" for showing the world that there were Germans who opposed the Nazi regime.

Pro-Russia rebels take control of Malaysia Airlines crash site

Eastern Ukraine.

International concern growing over handling of bodies and integrity of evidence on the ground

Rebels in eastern Ukraine took control Sunday of the bodies recovered from downed Malaysia Airlines Flight 17, and the U.S. and European leaders demanded that Russian President Vladimir Putin make sure rebels give international investigators full access to the crash site.

U.S. Secretary of State John Kerry said Ukraine's separatists were to blame for the downing of the aircraft, adding there was "extraordinary circumstantial evidence" that showed Russia was almost certainly complicit in arming the rebels.

"There's a stacking up of evidence here, which Russia needs to help account for. We are not drawing the final conclusion here. But there is a lot that points at the need for Russia to be responsible," Kerry said.

The key question of who controlled the collection of evidence at the crash site in rebel-held territory dominated the day's rapid-fire developments. International monitors say armed rebels have limited their access to the crash site and Ukrainian officials said armed rebels took the bodies away from their workers by force.

A wave of international outrage over how the bodies of the crash victims were being handled came amid fears that the armed rebels who control the crash site could be tampering with the evidence there.

Donetsk rebel leader Alexander Borodai said the bodies recovered from the crash site would remain in four refrigerated train cars in the rebel-held town of Torez, 15 kilometres from the crash site, until the arrival of an international aviation delegation.

The leaders of France, Germany and Britain issued a statement demanding that Putin make sure pro-Russia

Poll: Harper agenda out of touch with Canadians' concerns

Public-opinion research for the federal Finance Department suggests key government policies are out of step with Canadians' priorities, including the Northern Gateway project.

Members of focus groups consulted prior to the February budget had "little enthusiasm" for the proposed bitumen pipeline to the B.C. coast — even those who said they support the controversial project.

And among the 12 groups consulted — from Coquitlam, B.C., to Bridgewater, N.S. — the economy itself was not a top-of-mind concern.

Rather, the groups spontaneously raised education, health care, pensions and veterans as their key issues.

They also called for more processing and refining of Canada's oil resources at home, and to do so in a more environmentally safe manner.

The findings of the January focus groups, commissioned from NRG Research Group, suggest the Harper government's central policy themes — trade and the economy, with an emphasis on energy exports — are resonating less with ordinary Canadians.

"There is little enthusiasm for the (Northern Gateway) project, even among supporters," says a Jan. 25 report on the findings.

"Detractors worry about the environmental consequences in the event of a spill, particularly as a result of a tanker accident off the B.C. coast."

"There is an appreciation that increased market access for oil will be economically beneficial but there is still a desire to do so in a more environmentally safe manner."

The Harper government has made Northern Gateway a central plank of its energy strategy, and has pilloried environmental groups who oppose it, labelling them "radical." THE CANADIAN PRESS

What marketing and bomb scares have in common

An online video hoax of a shark in Lake Ontario that caused real-world consternation this past week demonstrates the attention-grabbing risks marketers are taking in an increasingly media-fractured universe, experts say.

The problem, they say, is that efforts to stand out from the crowd via "prankvertising" can easily backfire.

"Until you've done something, you can't really say, 'OK, maybe that wasn't the smartest idea,'" said Stephen Morgan, former creative director with MR.G in Toronto.

"There is definitely no rule book."

It was only on Wednesday — six days after the YouTube video surfaced, frightened some lake users and sparked safety concerns that ultimately reached the Ontario legislature — that Discovery Canada admitted the finned creature was a lifelike model.

The idea was to create some buzz for a TV series on real sharks, not cause terror, Discovery Canada president Paul Lewis said by way of an explanation.

"There was no anticipation on our side to cause any kind of fear or upset at all," Lewis said.

A screen grab from a YouTube video that turned out to be a marketing ploy for Discovery. The video claimed there was a shark in Lake Ontario. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Some observers were skeptical.

Morgan, who doesn't think the ad will mean a spike in viewership for Discovery, said creative talent at ad agencies aim to be "disruptive" and that in his opinion, "You can bet the (Discovery) creatives hoped for that, even if they downplayed it to the client. Shame on agencies for selling this kind of stuff."

Those behind the fake shark video said they decided to come clean when they became aware of stories of people talking about not getting in the water.

Sometimes, the disruption appears to be inadvertent, as happened earlier this month when a summer marketing campaign run by Coors Light

Canada — featuring a briefcase attached to a metal railing — prompted an emergency response and closure of a major intersection in Toronto during rush hour.

The briefcase, one of hundreds hidden across the country, was part of a month-long challenge to find prizes using an online map and social-media clues.

Jeremy Robinson, creative director with Toronto-based Jar Creative, said engineering a viral video without provoking anger or upset is difficult.

"We're in uncharted territory," Robinson said. "A lot of this stuff is brand new, and people are going to push the boundaries."

Real estate market

According to FitchRatings, Canada's real estate market is 20 per cent overpriced

You would think Canada's housing market is the champagne industry — there's so much talk of bubbles. For the past couple of years it's been bubble this and correction that. Yet the market keeps, well, bubbling up, at an annual rate of 4.4 per cent to the end of May 2014.

However, FitchRatings last week stated that Canada's real estate market was 20 per cent overpriced, while the Morningstar rating agency predicted that a 30 per cent correction could happen over the next few years.

What can you do to protect yourself? Here are some suggestions:

Landlords: An easing in prices, combined with continued low interest rates, is a homebuyer's perfect dream. A deep correction of more than 20 per cent is heaven itself. Should it come to pass, renters who are waiting and hoping for their chance at home sweet home will buy and the rental market will soften as vacancy rates climb. Landlords should stay on top of maintenance in order to keep their units as attractive as possible and stash cash just in case vacancy rates soar, leaving units empty.

Homeowners: Avoid a home equity line of credit because these are based on the property's value and may be reduced or eliminated when the mortgage term is up. If you must borrow to pay for essential repairs, consider re-mortgaging now if fees and penalties are not significant.

Prospective buyers: Don't. At least, not yet. Yes, if prices continue to defy the-sky-is-falling predictions, you may end up paying more. But having a bigger down payment could more than compensate and protect you from the impact of higher interest rates.

If real-estate money is burning a hole in your pocket, be a vicarious owner. Choose a low-fee exchange-traded fund (ETF) that tracks an index of Real Estate Investment Trusts (REITs) and is diversified among commercial, industrial and residential real estate.

My favourite REIT ETF is the BMO Equal Weight REIT (ZRE) because it is a little less concentrated in three of the biggest names: RioCan, Brookfield Office Properties Inc. and H&R REIT. The other two options are iShares S&P/TSX Capped REIT (XRE) and Vanguard FTSE Canadian Capped REIT (VRE).

WHERE YOU ARE AFFECTS HOW YOU ARE

I was at Laurier and Nicholas when my phone brought horrible news from my hometown.

A beloved friend, with whom I'd shared laughs and hugs at the cottage just a week before, was dead — suddenly and far too soon. Chris had fought through three years of hard health, but she was tough, getting better and unquestionably going to make it. Then this.

I kept walking west, stunned and not really seeing my city, my mind already down Highway 17 in the Ottawa Valley with her husband and four-year-old daughter. My eyes started watering around Bronson and they've stopped only intermittently since.

In between, I've tried to read State of Ottawa's Health 2014, a report from Ottawa Public Health that sums up our local well-being and repeatedly reminds me how much is determined by location, location, location. In Ottawa, 62 per cent of us report excellent or very good health. Only 12 per cent of us smoke — a historic low — but only 40 per cent eat enough fruit and vegetables. We drink more heavily than the province on average (particularly this week in my case) and smoke more weed.

URBAN COMPASS

"There are, however, other factors which influence health that are not addressed in full throughout this report," Dr. Isra Levy, Ottawa's Medical Officer of Health, notes in the report. "These factors, significant determinants of health, include income and social status, literacy, employment, and physical as well as social environments. Health is also determined by the services one receives, and the ability to obtain quality education, food and housing. Contrary to the assumption that each person has control over these factors, many are beyond individual control."

Chris, a nurse, became a patient about three years ago. It's worth noting that a botched surgery, from which so many complications followed, was botched in Ottawa.

She spent too much time in the hospitals, both in Ottawa and the one back home where she used to work, professionally and painfully aware that sometimes there wasn't much caring in the health care she received.

Some area residents will tell you, as they've told me, that they'll drive a little further down the highway to the next hospital to avoid their local one. Whether or not it's truly a worse facility, it seems to have an image problem, at least.

The Ottawa Public Health report introduces a statistic for the unspeakably sad: Potential Years of Life Lost (PYLL), a simple calculation based on how many years before age 75 a premature death comes. In 2009, Ottawa lost about 33,000 such years in total.

Chris was 35, so that's 40 PYLL, and while none of us measured her loss in those exact terms, the concept of lost years — and lost potential — was never far from mind.

The last night of her life, Chris made one last trip to Ottawa, not for another medical appointment, but to see Snoop Dogg at Bluesfest. She sat through most of it, but laboriously got up and danced when she just couldn't help it.

By all means guard your health, eat your veggies, exercise and blah, blah, blah, but remember to live. So much, as the good doctor says, is "beyond individual control."

The son also rises, but it's papa for the win in Hemingway lookalike contest

A white-bearded Arizona restaurateur has won Key West's annual "Papa" Hemingway Look-Alike Contest on his sixth attempt.

Wally Collins of Phoenix triumphed over 130 other entrants, including his son Matt Collins, late Saturday night at Sloppy Joe's Bar. The bar was a favorite of Ernest Hemingway during the 1930s. Competitors in sportsman's attire paraded before a judging panel of former winners during two preliminary rounds and the finals, trying to prove their resemblance to the real Hemingway.

Collins, who also has researched the role concussions may have played in Hemingway's 1961 suicide, said he admired Hemingway's ideals and taste for adventure.

"I didn't have as many wives as he had, and I have a lot more children and grandchildren, but there are a lot of things that he stood for that I really like," Collins said. Hemingway was born on July 21, 1899.

The Dirty Heads' summer bummer — gone too soon

Sound of Change.

New album heavy on reggae-rock vibe with a song detailing a short-lived summer romance

CHRIS CARPENTER

Metro in New York City

With August fast approaching, SoCal rockers Dirty Heads express their bittersweet qualms with the fleeting nature of the season on My Sweet Summer, the lead track from their fourth studio album, Sound of Change.

"I was doing a writing exercise where I was writing songs for other people and sending them out. Kenny Chesney and I were shooting emails back and forth, so I had started this country-ish, reggae-ish song," Jared "Dirty J" Watson, lead singer of the Dirty Heads, says about the early inception of Summer.

Chesney — arguably country music's reigning king right now — is a self-proclaimed super-fan of the Dirty Heads.

"I think country music is great; it's hilarious. I love the storytelling aspect," Watson says. "For somebody like Kenny Chesney to have touched so many people and have so many fans — obviously he's doing something amazing. For him to play our music before his shows, that's just really cool. It's crazy. That whole 'barefoot, sand, Coronas' vibe that he brings is like the country version of us. He's a very cool dude."

Of course, Summer, the way the Dirty Heads play it, doesn't exactly sound like a country tune. Inspired by the escape of summer — both literally and figuratively — Watson crafted the song around the departure of a summer romance.

"When the idea of 'my sweet summer is gone' came and we [the band] nailed down the idea and the gist of the story that we wanted to tell, it was just about painting a cool picture. We knew that we had something special," says Watson.

Dirty Heads' most successful song to date came in 2010 with the acoustic surf tune Lay Me Down. The song reached No. 1 on both Billboard's Alternative chart and Rock chart.

"[Surf culture] tied into our music very heavily in the beginning. Now that we're grown men and have been doing this for 10 years and have seen the world, I think that this band is a lot more international and worldly," says Watson. "I think our new album is a little broader. It's so heavy on that reggae-rock vibe. It's something new."

Long past their days of crawling the country in a van, the band are currently on tour with Pepper and are playing select dates with 311.

"Touring in a van and not making any money for seven years made us who we were," says Watson. "We didn't care; it was all about the music. We knew it was going to pay off."

Lindsay Lohan really has it easy sometimes. No, wait. Hear me out. Lohan's career as a "celebrated" actress comes from one film, Mean Girls, that came out 10 years ago. Since then, the films she's actually managed to show up for have been disappointments and duds, yet she's still held on to the promise that Mean Girls created. And now she's been feted at the Ischia Global Seems a bit premature, since she's not even in rehearsals yet, but whatever. She's back! Again! Come to think of it, every time Lohan has signed up to do anything, it's considered a comeback. Maybe she deserves the award after all.

Do your rating credit. Check it

On file. Everything you ever wanted to know — and maybe a few things you didn't — about your credit history and why you should keep an eye on it

GAIL VAZ-OXLADE
Gail blogs daily at gailvazoxlade.com

Have you checked your credit file recently? You should.

Your credit file contains a listing of debit and credit payments and it includes public record information about how promptly you've paid bills, along with all the yucky stuff like collections, judgements and bankruptcies.

Typically credit agencies will keep a record of accounts that were paid and have no negative history for up to 20 years or for as long as you have a relationship with the company with which you did business. If you cancel an account, the credit agency has no way of maintaining a current and accurate credit file so they often delete credit information. That's why when you cancel a credit card the credit history that goes with it disappears. If you have a long history with a credit card supplier and want to stop using that card, cut it up but don't cancel the account until you've established a credit history on a new card.

Most people don't realize that when a business makes an inquiry — when it checks your credit — that inquiry not only affects your credit score, but it stays on your file for one to six years depending on the type of inquiry.

It's up to you to check and make sure there are no inaccurate reports in your credit file. ISTOCK

Annual credit check-up

Check your credit files at least once a year to ensure the information is correct.

- Send a written request to one of the two major credit bureaus in Canada: Equifax Canada Inc. or Trans Union of Canada Inc.

- More information can be found online at equifax.ca and transunion.ca.

- There is no charge for this service if you ask for your record by mail.

Some credit-reporting agencies report the lenders' rating of each of your credit history items on a scale of 1 to 9. A rating of "1" means you pay your bills within 30 days of the due date. A rating of "9" means that you never pay your bills at all or that you have made a consumer debt repayment proposal to the lender. A letter will also appear in front of the number: for example, I2, O2, R2. The letter stands for the type of credit you are using.

"I" refers to an installment loan, such as for a car loan, where you borrow money once and repay it in fixed amounts, on a regular basis, for a specific period of time until the loan is paid off. "O" refers to open credit such as a line of credit, where you borrow money, as needed, up to a certain limit and the total balance is due at the end of each period. "R" refers to revolving credit, on which you make regular payments in varying amounts depending on the balance of your account, and can then borrow more money up to your credit limit. Credit cards are revolving credit.

If you've mucked up your credit, know that the record of your financial indiscretions will remain on your file for all who inquire to see for up to six years after you diddled around and defaulted on the account.

If you go through a debt repayment program, like one offered through credit counseling, the record will be removed from your file two years after you finish paying off your agreed upon amount, or six years after you defaulted on the account, whichever comes first. If you do a consumer proposal, the proposal and all accounts reported as satisfied through the proposal are removed from your file three years from the date you satisfied the proposal.

The amount of time a bankruptcy stays on file is dependent on where you live. Typically, if you live in B.C., Yukon, N.W.T., Nunavut, Alberta, Saskatchewan, Manitoba or Nova Scotia, the record will stay in place for six years from the date of discharge. In Ontario, Quebec, New Brunswick, P.E.I. and Newfoundland and Labrador, it stays on record for seven years from the date of discharge. However, if you've gone bankrupt more than once, each will remain on your file for 14 years from the date of discharge of each bankruptcy.

If you get a judgement against you, the same rules apply as with bankruptcy except for P.E.I., which keeps the record on file for ten years.

If you've been sent to collections, the record will be removed from your file six years after the date you defaulted on the account with the original creditor.

So if some collector calls you up after six years and says they're trying to collect on the debt, they have no recourse and you can blow 'em off. Your record is clear.

The longer you exhibit good credit behavior by paying your bills on time and managing your credit wisely, the more your credit rating will improve, until you once again achieve a favorable credit rating. And if you've got a good rating that's been marred by inaccurate reporting, it's your job to fix it.

Love or lust? Eyes will tell

Does your date see you as a potential soul mate or an object of lust? Gaze patterns — more specifically where he or she looks — could help you find your answer, according to researchers at the University of Chicago.

They say that glancing at the other person's body could indicate sexual desire, while focusing on the eyes and face is an indicator of love and such judgment reveals itself rapidly.

"Although little is currently known about the science of love at first sight or how people fall in love, these patterns of response provide the first clues regarding how automatic attentional processes, such as eye gaze, may differentiate feelings of love from feelings of desire toward strangers," says lead author Stephanie Cacioppo, director of the UChicago High-Performance Electrical Neuro-Imaging Laboratory.

Co-author John Cacioppo, director of the Center for Cognitive and Social Neuroscience, says the study indicates eye tracking could be useful in the field of psychiatry and more specifically in couples' therapy.

Money 101. Two couples, one year to make them richer

Never been so happy — and so rich

Since January, two Canadian couples have taken on the challenge to completely change their financial future. Together, we have worked on budgets, debt reduction, retirement planning, home-buying and financial planning. Both couples have risen to the challenge and have collectively improved their net worth by more than $50,000. Parenting has brought Anne-Marie and Peter tremendous joy this past month, despite a few feeding and sleeping challenges. Adding to their glee is a growing bottom line. In particular, a strengthening stock market has contributed to a large increase in the value of Anne-Marie's defined benefit pension — more than 25 per cent since January. While on parental leave, she will continue to participate in her plan, adding to the value, but this will eat into the couple's maternity budget.

Anne-Marie's and Peter's cash flow has taken a bit of a hit lately as the couple deals with nursing challenges. The cost of feeding consultants and prescriptions has totalled close to $1,000, but Anne-Marie, in particular, feels the issue is nearly resolved. To afford these medical expenditures, the couple paid $1,000 less toward their debts this past month and will keep their receipts for tax time as they may qualify for tax credits. Overall, these unexpected expenses have reinforced the need for building emergency funds going forward.

For the remainder of the year, the couple will endeavour to become debt-free. They still owe $5,200 on their low-rate credit card and $2,800 on their vehicle loan. Spread

Carolina and Jose are looking forward to decorating their new townhome. SHUTTERSTOCK

Carolina and Jose

Carolina and Jose have officially settled into their new townhome and credit three reasons for why they are so happy.

First, for the first time in their lives, they have a forced mechanism to save money through building equity in a home they own. Through bi-weekly mortgage payments of approximately $590 and a five-year, fixed rate of 2.99 per cent, a huge chunk of Carolina's and Jose's payments are going toward equity rather than interest.

Second, their home is theirs to do with as they wish. They have been dreaming about what features, such as paint and light fixtures, they would eventually like to upgrade.

But before they get ahead of themselves, Carolina's and Jose's homework is to create a list of what they would like to improve, by when and the cost. This will help balance out their home improvements so they give themselves enough time to save up rather than charge to their credit card. Luckily, they have already been able to avoid one meaty home maintenance item — a new water heater, which was replaced by the former owner.

Third, their three girls are adjusting well and making new friends — a priceless benefit.

This month, the couple is

Their debt repayment plan starts with a revised budget, taking into account their new home and an understanding of how much they can afford to pay each month. Thus, Carolina's and Jose's second homework item this month is to revise their budget.

To further reduce their debt, Jose is considering selling his 15-year-old car and putting that money toward their debts.

He no longer needs his vehicle because his work supplies him with a truck.

Ideally, the couple wants to strike a balance between becoming debt-free while sprucing up their new pad.

How many chefs are in your life's kitchen?

LESSONS FROM THE DESERT
life@metronews.ca

The severe market crash in October 2008 changed my life. I started running to regain my health, both emotional and physical. Shortly after I took my first steps, I ran the Gobi March in China in June '09, followed by the Atacama Crossing in Chile in '10 and the Sahara Race in Egypt in '11. In this post, I share a lesson learned from my experience running deserts.

When I took on the Gobi, the scope of the project was too vast to take on by myself. The project's novelty forced me to solicit help in my preparation from those around me: my family, my colleagues, my social circle. While at first all of this advice was welcome, it rapidly got to be too much. I had too many chefs in my kitchen.

One of the first action items when taking on a major endeavour is to get oriented. This means framing the data in order to build a plan. While this orientation requires the assistance of others, the challenge is knowing when we have enough data points to create the blueprint. Too little information results in an ill-conceived plan; too much results in a state of paralysis and therefore inaction.

Three weeks into my Gobi preparation, my refrain switched from a novel, "Great idea, I'm doing it" to, "Thanks for sharing, there are many ways to prepare for this challenge and I have determined what is most effective for me."

We have all witnessed someone take on a challenge with a tangible risk of failure. Those who take on limited accountability distance themselves if the challenge proves unsuccessful. In this case, the finger points at the collaborative process: either others didn't come through, or they provided the wrong advice.

In the desert, however, I was left to my own devices. Placing the burden of failure on an unnamed "other" would not get me to the finish line. Instead, I trained my thoughts toward collaboration, by hearing and considering others' opinions and ideas, but only listening to my own.

In the end, we are all the chefs of our own kitchens. While it takes a village to raise a child, one man's race begins with his first step alone.

Emily Post made a name for herself in the early 1900s as a world-renowned expert on etiquette and manners, advising readers on everything from making polite conversation to the right way to host an afternoon tea. Several generations later, her descendants are continuing her legacy with a 21st century twist — by advising people on life in the digital age.

The family has just released the third edition of their book Emily Post's The Etiquette Advantage in Business.

While it's been less than a decade since the last book was released, the Posts say that because the business world has changed so rapidly in recent years, it can be tough to navigate it all.

"It's kind of unbelievable the leaps and bounds we have made in just the last few years and how much digital usage has increased," says Lizzie Post, Emily's great-great-granddaughter. We asked Post for her take on several modern social media dilemmas many of us face in the workplace.

To friend or not to friend?

When it comes to Facebook, think hard about whether you want to add your co-workers. "While typically most of us have always bonded with our co-workers, it's really different today," Lizzie Post points out. "Previously, it was very controlled in what you allowed your co-workers to see [in your life outside of work]. But now you are not just letting them see your photos, you are also letting them see the conversations you are having with other people."

Post notes that letting someone into your personal online space is a private decision and reminds everyone that they are in charge of the process. "You have to decide what works for you," says Post. "You can always tell a co-worker, 'I had to make a decision and I decided not to mix my work and personal lives.'"

Should you accept that LinkedIn request?

With the popularity of LinkedIn, it's common to get all sorts of connection requests from everyone from elementary school friends to your neighbours. "I don't respond to people on LinkedIn that I don't know well or that I haven't worked with closely," says Post of her own personal policy. "For people like high school friends, unless I know your work, I decline the request."

What if you really don't want to write that LinkedIn recommendation?

"I don't recommend friends," says Post. "It's one thing to Ask yourself what impression you are making online

Post says you may want to erase those, but that it's ultimately up to you to decide what's important to you. "Are you going to let your career dictate your online persona or are you the type of person that is going to say, 'No, this is who I am and I am going to find a position where this isn't going to matter?'" Post asks.

be friends with you, but that doesn't mean that I know how you work. With endorsements, it's a bit different. If I have seen your blog and have read your book, then I feel like I can do it."

Post says to remember that saying no is always an option.

Distraction at the desk

The issue with interruptions at the office

A new study confirms what many office workers have long suspected: multitasking doesn't work. A paper in the journal Human Factors notes that the average office worker is interrupted six times every hour and that these interruptions deeply impact the quality of work produced.

"People don't realize how disruptive interruptions can be," said Cyrus Foroughi, one of the co-authors of the study told Science Daily. "There is value in determining whether interruptions affect the quality of the tasks that many people perform regularly." Foroughi and his fellow researchers asked two different groups of participants to write an essay for them. While each group was given enough time to write and outline their compositions on the assigned topic, one group was repeatedly interrupted while participants attempted to write their essays. METRO WORLD NEWS

Full steam ahead. Be more productive at work with these tips

DAN SCHAWBEL
Metro World News

Companies are putting more pressure on employees now than ever before and pushing them to do more with fewer resources in the same amount of time. Furthermore, there's an expectation that you're always answering work emails, regardless of the day of the week or if you're on vacation.

Here are some tips for keeping up productivity at work while keeping these tough times in mind:

Start with a list of tasks that can be completed quickly

This way, you can get the smaller stuff out of the way and give more of your attention and effort to the bigger projects. By doing this, you won't have to worry about those smaller tasks that could end up getting in the way of the ones that really matter. Let's say you have a list of 20 tasks that you have to get to in a given day. If you can eliminate five quickly, it won't seem as bad, and it's very motivating to accomplish several items in a short period of time. It's intimidating having so many tasks sometimes and it puts a lot of stress on you if you do have that many, so eliminate the easy ones first.

Try not to multi-task if you can help it

I fall into this trap all of the time, and most Millennials do too. We try and do multiple projects at once and end up not getting anything done. Research shows that multitasking decreases productivity. If you give each individual task the attention it deserves, you'll be more effective.

Use a calendar to keep track of everything

I use my iPhone calendar to run my life. If there's someone I know I should call in two months, I'll mark it down to send them an email then. If I have a speaking engagement or a potential client I have to follow up with, I'll mark it down. This makes life much easier, and you end up not forgetting anything so you're more effective. Another trick I do is to set two reminders for every event. One occurs a day before and the other happens 15 minutes before. This way, I never miss anything.

Get'er done

"It's intimidating having so many tasks sometimes and it puts a lot of stress on you if you do have that many, so eliminate the easy ones first."

Dan Schawbel, Career and Workplace Expert

A new study by CareerBuilder found that the biggest distractions that workers have are their cellphones (50 per cent), gossip (42 per cent) and the Internet (39 per cent). ISTOCK

"There are many that would say that the market is a game, but we're not trying to say that," says Kapitall's CEO Jarett Lilien. "But if you look at games, games should be approachable to those who are new to it."

Many people think that the markets are extremely

Time to revive the planking craze to give salmon a delicious smoky flavour

Cedar Planked Salmon with Maple Glaze. This fish makes a perfect partner for the barbecue and contains healthy fats

When it comes to summer-time cooking, the barbecue is the easiest, most enjoyable and social way to cook.

Salmon is my number one fish for the "barbie," but cooking it on a cedar plank is so much more flavourful.

You can purchase the thin wooden planks in your grocery store where fish are sold. Soak them in water for at least 20 minutes to prevent burning.

For an alternative cooking option, feel free to bake your salmon in 425 F oven for 10 minutes per each inch of thickness.

I prefer to use organic salmon as a precaution against mercury and other pollutants that can be in our fish.

Salmon, a fatty fish, is an excellent source of omega-3 fatty acids. It's proved to be beneficial in the treatment of osteoarthritis, cardiovascular health and in decreasing the risk of macular degeneration.

The maple syrup sauce over top of the fish is addictive. I also use it over grilled chicken, pork or tofu.

You can cook the sauce up to 3 days in advance and refrigerate. When you are ready to use it, reheat it in a small skillet over low heat just until it is warmed through.

Happy (and healthy) grilling!

Directions

1. Preheat your barbecue to 425 F and either spray a cedar plank or grill with vegetable oil.

2. Whisk the maple syrup, soy sauce, water, vinegar, oil, cornstarch, garlic and ginger together in a small saucepan. Cook the mixture over medium heat until thickened and smooth, about 2 minutes. Remove the sauce from the heat. If it is too thick, just add a little bit of water.

3. Place the salmon, skin-side down, on the plank or grill. Brush the top half of the salmon with some sauce. Sprinkle with sesame seeds. Cover the grill and cook for 10 minutes per inch of thickness or until the fish flakes easily when pierced with a fork.

4. Garnish the finished salmon with cilantro and serve on the cedar plank with the remaining sauce on the side.

Ingredients

- 1/4 cup pure maple syrup
- 2 tbsp low-sodium soy sauce
- 1 tbsp water
- 2 tbsp rice vinegar
- 2 tsp sesame oil
- 2 tsp cornstarch
- 2 tsp minced fresh garlic
- 1 1/2 tsp minced fresh ginger
- Four 4-oz skin-on salmon fillets
- 2 tsp sesame seeds
- 3 tbsp chopped cilantro or parsley

Roasting brings out a wonderful flavour that's much better than steamed or boiled.

Brussels sprouts are part of the cruciferous vegetable family and contain an antioxidant known to fight cancer. Additionally, they are also an excellent source of fibre.

This dish is also great served at room temperature as a salad.

1. Preheat the oven to 400 F. Line the baking sheets with foil sprayed with vegetable oil.

2. Place the brussels sprouts in a bowl and add the Parmesan, olive oil, salt and pepper, and garlic. Mix well and place on the baking sheet along with the red pepper.

3. Roast for 20 minutes, turning occasionally just until tender and slightly browned. Peel the skin off the pepper and cut into large wedges.

4. Garnish with almonds.

Boy Wonder is back

Third youngest. At 25, Rory McIlroy safely wins the British Open

Walking off the 18th green as the British Open champion, Rory McIlroy kept gazing at the names of all the greats on golf's oldest trophy.

On the claret jug, his name is etched in silver below that of Phil Mickelson.

In the record book, he is listed behind Jack Nicklaus and Tiger Woods as the youngest to win three legs of the career Grand Slam.

And over four days at Royal Liverpool, he had no equal.

"I'm immensely proud of myself," McIlroy said after his two-shot victory Sunday that was never really in doubt. "To sit here, 25 years of age, and win my third major championship and be three-quarters of the way to a career Grand Slam ... yeah, I never dreamed of being at this point in my career so quickly."

He had to work a little harder than he wanted for this one.

Staked to a six-shot lead going into the final round, McIlroy turned back every challenge. He made two key birdies around the turn, and delivered a majestic drive at just the right moment to close with a 1-under 71 and complete his wire-to-wire victory.

In another major lacking tension over the final hour, what brought The Open to life was the potential of its champion.

After nearly two years of turmoil, McIlroy looked like the kid who shattered scoring records to win the 2011

U.S. Open at Congressional, and who won the PGA Championship at Kiawah Island by a record eight shots a year later.

Boy Wonder is back. Or maybe he's just getting started again.

McIlroy won by two shots over Sergio Garcia and Rickie Fowler to become the first start-to-finish winner since Woods at St. Andrews in 2005. Even with one major left this year, the Northern Irishman already is looking ahead to Augusta National next April for a shot at the slam.

"I've really found my passion again for golf," McIlroy said. "Not that it ever dwindled, but it's what I think about when I get up in the morning. It's what I think about when I go to bed. I just want to be the best golfer that I can be. And I know if I can do that, then trophies like this are within my capability."

McIlroy put an end to this major with a powerful drive down the fairway at the par-5 16th, setting up a two-putt birdie to restore his lead to three shots. He finished with two pars, tapping in for par on the 18th green.

The hard part was trying not to cry when his mother, Rosie, came onto the green with tears streaming down her face. She was not at the other two majors. Before leaving, McIlroy turned and applauded the fans in the horseshoe arena who were witness to another masterpiece. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
